WASHINGTON D.C.

Washington, D.C., the capital of the United States, is not only a political and administrative center but also a city rich in history, culture, and landmarks. Located on the east coast along the Potomac River, D.C. stands as a symbol of the nation's values, its struggles, and its triumphs. It is a place where the past and present converge, offering both residents and visitors a unique blend of political significance and historical depth.

Washington, D.C. was established as the nation's capital in 1790, chosen for its strategic location between the northern and southern states. The city was designed by French architect Pierre Charles L'Enfant and constructed with grand plans to symbolize the democratic ideals of the new nation. Today, the city remains the seat of the federal government, housing the White House, the U.S. Capitol, and the Supreme Court. These iconic buildings are not only architectural marvels but also represent the political heart of the United States.

APPNA CONTINUING MEDICAL EDUCATION

The main objective of the APPNA committee of Continuing Medical Education is to assist practicing physicians, advanced practice providers, and other health care professionals in their professional development by providing educational activities to enhance their knowledge and skills in their respective areas of practice, thereby improving performance and patient outcomes.

APPNA provides ACCME-certified Continuing Medical Education activities in the form of courses, conferences, and workshops at the sidelines of its annual business meetings. Both presenters & organisers of these CME activities spend countless number of hours to deliver high quality educational activities as well as hands on workshops with up to date medical knowledge and fine skills. To this end, these CME sessions are designed to engage learners in interactive learning sessions and enhance skills that can be applied in clinical practice or in research/academic setting.

APPNA meetings also have exhibit areas to allow our colleagues in Healthcare industry demonstrate cutting edge medical innovations/devices and advanced technology in the field of Medicine.
